

Just in case you missed this on our website, we would like to confirm a couple of things.

When answering the Knowledge Base questions, we ask that any information you provide is yours to share (i.e you have permission from any person or entity that owns copyright, you provide a true representation of the work you undertake, etc). Any content within an entry into the Knowledge Base can be used by the Our World Of Work team within the www.ourworldofwork.com site (or any future site we develop), via any marketing efforts including but not limited to our social media platforms, without needing to seek any additional authorisation.

We hope to keep all entries true to their original content, however in the event any content we notice is misspelled, could be deemed offensive or inappropriate to our audience; Our World of Work team reserve the right to edit content provided without prior approval of the original author.

Note - "_____ " is just a maker to show where an answer is required and indication of length our contributors typically provide. Delete/type next to it as you go- thanks. Green text is supportive info for the question in hand.
